

100 percent soccer

soccer in and around los angeles

About 100 Percent Soccer

Sportswriter Nick Green has written the 100 Percent Soccer column since 2005. The blog of the same name began in 2007. A native of England, he began writing about soccer in the mid-1980s and in 2000 permanently exchanged a seat in the stands for one in the press box. He lives six miles from Carson's Home Depot Center, home of the Los Angeles Galaxy, Chivas USA and the training headquarters for U.S. Soccer and is married to a long-suffering soccer widow. Join Nick on FaceBook.

About this Entry

This page contains a single entry by Nick Green published on December 7, 2008 12:50 PM.

Sunday Soccer: A South Bayan & a Bruin was the previous entry in this blog.

Triple Championship Sunday is the next entry in this blog.

Find recent content on the main index or look in the archives to find all content.

Recent Comments

Subscribe to this blog's feed

Cal State Dominguez Hills: National Champions

Previous Entry | Next Entry

By Nick Green on December 7, 2008 12:50 PM | Permalink | Comments \(0\) | ShareThis

A dominating 3-0 win today over Dowling State gave Cal State Dominguez Hills the Division II national championship.

"This team definitely peaked at the right time," said Coach Joe Flanagan on national television, as he held a photograph of former player Jaret Minami, who died just before the season began. "We played our best soccer in the last three weeks of the season."

It's the second national title in eight years for Flanagan and the Toros.

Categories: College Soccer

Leave a comment

Sign in to comment on this entry, or comment anonymously.